DR. KUNCES SPEAKS TO PARENTS

Dr. Joseph C. Kunces, superintendent of the Old Rochester School District, spoke to parents and friends of handicapped and retarded children at the home of Mrs. Dennis Sylvia in Marion. Many new members joined the group at this important meeting to hear Dr. Kunces explain some of the educational possibilities for these special children in this area.

The opening statement made by Dr. Kunces was that the kindest service parents can do for their children is to meet like this, to recognize your child's needs and to inform the school officials of these specific needs.

At the present time the only school in the immediate area suited to handle handicapped children is the Old Hammondtown School which has ramps and special rest room facilities. Special classes are now being held in Mattapoisett for the younger children and in Marion for the older children. Dr. Kunces expects to be able to open classes for the perceptually handicapped in Rochester in September. Each of the three towns cannot support these programs alone. Children must travel from town to town. Legislation is being enacted to assist the towns in these problems. Even the older persons in need of help are being assisted in the New Bedford program.

One of the biggest problems for special schooling is for the emotionally disturbed. He feels that all children should have home environment contact and not placed in an institution unless absolutely necessary. He emphasized, "don't overprotect these children". These special children should be with other youngsters of

Dr. Kunces informed the group a Title III, Federal funded program in the Bourne area is underway and should be put into effect by next Fall. This project will consist mostly of a diagnostic program for children with learning handicaps. A small bus will be available to transport children to classes.

A major need in this area is for a speech therapist, however it is a great problem to find competent personnel. To make a class possible a unit of 5 youngsters is needed. The parents present informed Dr. Kunces there were more than 5 children at the present time ready for classes. The superintendent stated he is investigating every avenue for obtaining a suitable teacher, one preferably with clinical speech training.

During a question and answer period it was brought out that possibly a class for mentally disturbed children could be joined with Fairhaven. He recommended parents go first to a pediatrician for diagnosis and then come to the school system to find a place for this child. The school could be classed as filling a prescription once a child has been diagnosed. Dr. Kunces felt someone in the group should keep informed on Legislation and in turn inform the parents.

The next meeting of the group will be held in Mattapoisett at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Moran, Ned's Point Road, at 8 P.M. on May 17th. A welcome is extended to parents or friends from the towns of Marion, Mattapoisett and Rochester.

Mattapoisett Grange

GRANGE MEETING

Mattapoisett Grange held its bi-monthly meeting last Thursday night with the worthy master, Susan Bence, presiding.

Reports on the Junior Grange Degree were given by the matron, Home and Community Service by Mrs. Ruby Barber, who reported on the afternoon whist party and donations she has sent. She announced that next Thursday afternoon the Home and Community Service Sewing Group would meet at the home of Mrs. Otto Kellish. The patches on the apron that had been passed around asking the members to sew in a patch, a penny an inch for their waistline measurement, will be opened and results will be sent in to the State chairman for the Diabetes Health project.

A report of visits and gifts and cards sent to the members who are ill was given by Mrs. Kellish. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Furtado and Mrs. Jennie Toolis reported on the very successful Monday night whist party they conducted.

An appeal was made that more members take part in helping on the Monday night whist parties. A date will be announced by the Master for a Fair committee meeting.

At the close of the meeting a Happy Birthday party was held when all members' birthdays were celebrated. The program opened with everyone singing Happy Birthday. At the

The birthday tables were gaily decorated, each with its own individual cake cut by the hostess. Susan and Christine Bence and Corrine Lawrence served ice cream, punch and coffee.

Prizes awarded by the lecturer were to Mrs. Margarite Vaughan, the prettiest cake, a Maybasket, and to William Smith of Walter Caswell's group.

The lecturer's march prize was awarded to Mrs. Ruth Shaw who received a Maybasket. Ways and Means packages went to Mrs. Rebecca Downing and Albert Pemberton. All members received individual basket cups of goodies.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Blank were judges. It was declared a most enjoyable members' birthday party. The program closed with a solo, "When I Kneel Down to Pray", by Walter Caswell.

The next meeting, May 18th, will be mix-up night. Who will be the presiding officers?

OIL POLLUTION CONFERENCE HASTINGS KEITH DISCUSSES REMEDIES

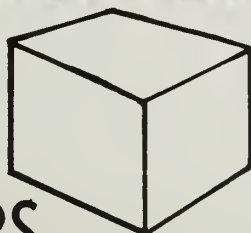

Congressman Hastings Keith (R-Mass.) returned May 6th from London where he attended a two-day international conference on oil pollution and visited the oil-blackened beaches of Cornwall. The emergency session of IMCO (Intergovernmental Maritime Consultative Organization) was called to discuss the sinking of the oil tanker Torrey Canyon off the British coast last month and to study methods of dealing with future oil pollution threats.

The Congressman traveled by helicopter and car over the more than 100 miles of English beaches which had been polluted by 60,000 tons of crude oil from the stricken Torrey Canyon. This area is similar to Cape Cod in Keith's Congressional district, which was also affected by oil slicks this April. Like Cape Cod, Cornwall is heavily dependent on the tourist trade and to some extent on fishing. Even the names of several towns, Truro, for example, are identical to towns on the Cape. Keith said that his purpose was to see how the shores in milky-white masses. The detergent, which is provided by the Esso and Gulf oil companies, is still being used at the rate of 60,000 gallons a day. In some areas United States Navy and Marine personnel have assisted British military forces who are conducting the clean-up.

In the case of oil still on the water, the Congressman said that the British method was to spray the detergent over the oil from boats or helicopters, and then to let the incoming tide agitate the mixture. On the beaches, detergent is churned into the oil-soaked sand by bulldozers and agricultural equipment which has been mobilized for the purpose. Some local authorities were worried that the oil and detergent were killing the minute plant-life on which many fish depend for food. Fishing boats were continuing to operate, however, and fish prices and consumption do not seem to have been seriously affected. The rocky breeding grounds of many shellfish were the hardest hit, and it was feared that the seals which inhabit the waters off Lands End would suffer from contamination of their food.

"I believe that the British have done a truly heroic job of combatting this tragic pollution", Keith said. "But it is clear from the $6 million which has already been spent in the clean-up, and the untold millions in losses to private citizens, that this can never be allowed to happen again."

The IMCO meeting, which was attended by 24 member nations, set up far-reaching inquiries into 15 fields of maritime law and practice which relate to oil transport on the seas. It is expected that recommendations on some of the issues will be ready for submission to the next general assembly of IMCO in October.

Measures considered by the conference came under three headings: methods of prevention, methods of combatting pollution in the water, and changes in international law to compensate people injured by pollution and to allow governments to act swiftly for self-protection. A special legal committee was set up by IMCO to study the legal issues, while the technical questions would be dealt with by existing committees.

Preventive measures urged by the United States, Great Britain and France included establishment of special sea lanes to control heavy ocean traffic and to prevent collisions near seacoasts as well as land-based radio guidance for tankers and other large vessels. A study will also be made of construction and design requirements for oil tankers in order to limit the risk of stranding and oil leakage.

To combat pollution of the coastline, it was agreed to work out standard operating procedures to provide manpower, supplies and equipment at short notice. This would eliminate the delay experienced by the British when it was unknown until the last minute what action to take. Research would also be intensified to find ways of containing or dispersing oil without injury to fish resources and other sea life.

In proposing legal changes to give states
new rights of self-protection, Keith pointed out that the conference adopted the same approach put forward in a bill he has introduced before the Congress. Coastal nations could assume jurisdiction over vessels outside their territorial waters in cases where an oil accident threatened to pollute beaches and fishing grounds or to damage the coastal economy.
Other measures considered were making the owners of oil tankers and their cargoes liable for pollution damage, whether accidental or deliberate. Compulsory insurance for the purpose of paying off the claims of injured parties is also on the agenda for study.

Congressman Keith said that the conference
had been successful in laying down new guidelines for international cooperations to deal with the oil pollution danger. He called for action by the United States to initiate efforts along the lines suggested by IMCO. He will present an official report and recommendations to the Congress in the near future.
